Customer Higher income customer able to afford the high cost of purchasing a home and raising a family in this area mixed with recent college graduates moving to Chicago for the first time. Secondary and tertiary areas surrounding this trade area provide solid incomes along with a broader geography.

Retailer An increasing number of national retailers changing the landscape once dominated by local apparel merchants. Several independent, albeit sophisticated developers, have purchased multiple properties, so the number of national retail stores continue to increase. Extensive restaurant and entertainment offerings cater to the dense residential market and Wrigley Field.

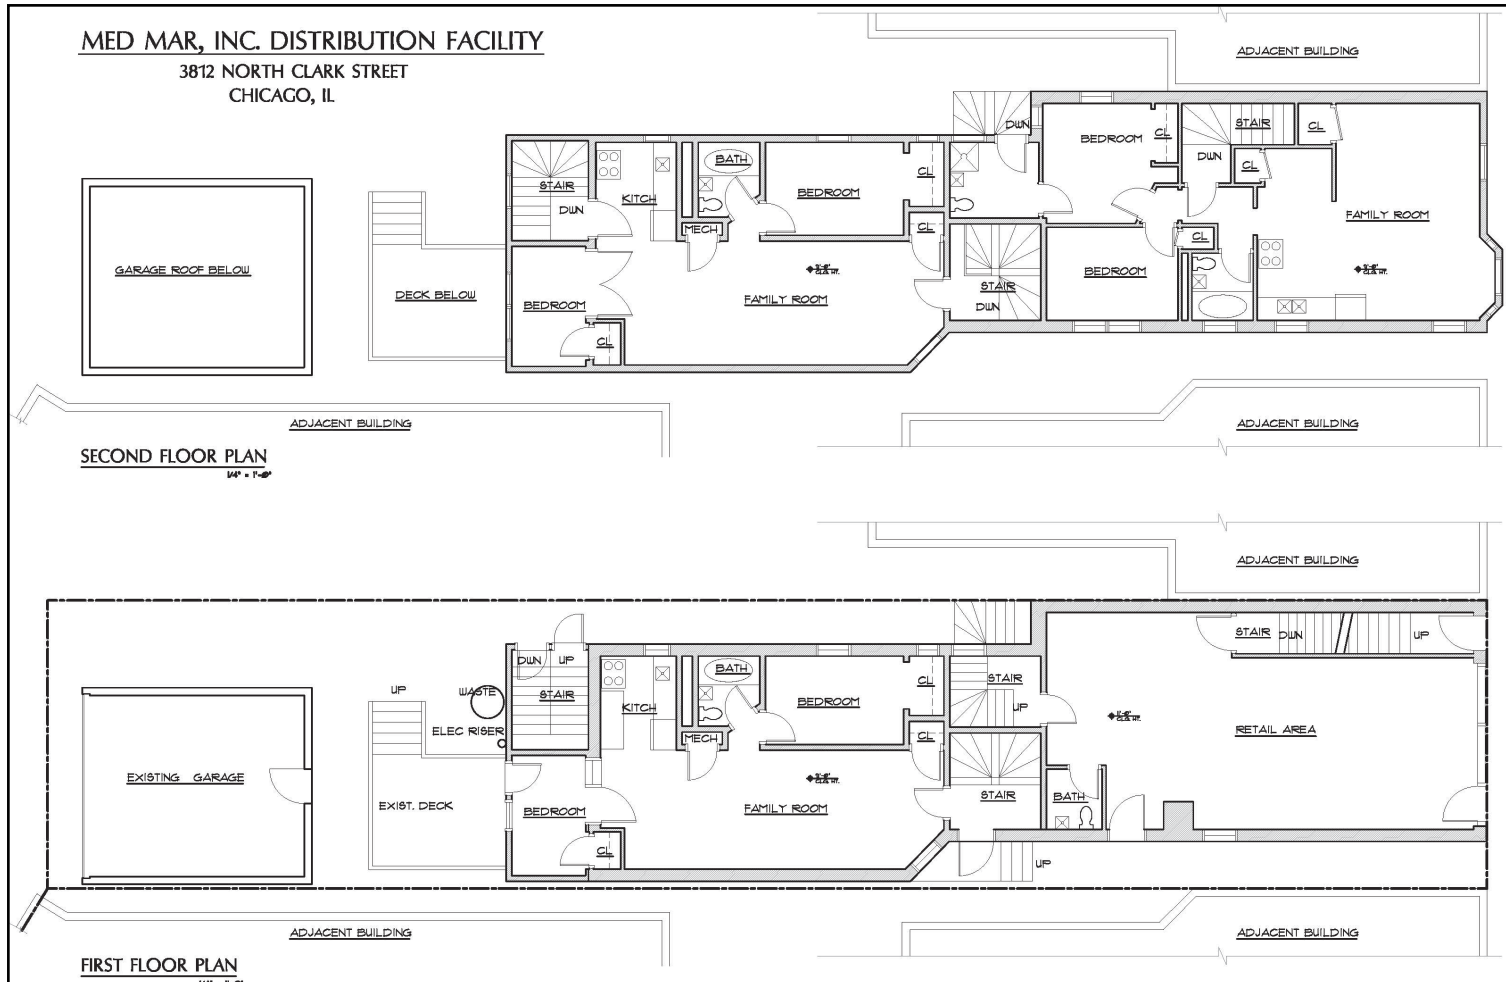

Overall Market The neighborhood is served by the CTA Brown Line and Red Line trains, the Clark & Addison bus routes and ample street parking. Investors, seeing the success of local and national retailers over the past several years, continue to scoop up buildings to improve their retail tenancy or to demolish them and build new. The continued performance of Southport, the successful renovation of Wrigley Field and the recent developments immediately surrounding the stadium have firmly placed this trade area on the national radar.
